

Dr Pádraig Hogan is a Ministerial nominee to the Teaching Council. Pádraig is a member of the Disciplinary and Education Committees and the Post-primary Applications Panel. Originally from Caltra in County Galway, Pádraig is a graduate of University College Galway and Trinity College Dublin. He currently lives in Dublin and is Senior Lecturer in Education at NUI Maynooth. His research interests focus mainly on the enhancement of educational practice. He has a particular interest in teacher education, including pre-service, induction and continuing professional development. He hopes the Teaching Council will be embraced by Ireland's teachers as a leading international example of how teaching might be developed as an innovative practice.