

Dr Sinéad McCauley Lambe | Marino Institute of Education

General Biography

Sinéad McCauley Lambe is a lecturer in education at Marino Institute of Education specialising in Early Childhood Education. Prior to joining MIE, Sinéad taught for eleven years in St. Vincent's Infant Boys' school in North William Street. Here, Sinéad moved into resource teaching and worked with children with ASD and those experiencing a wide range of emotional and behavioural difficulties. It was this work that ignited Sinéad's interest in educational disadvantage, motor development, early intervention, and student well-being. Sinéad has a strong interest in the continuous professional development of teachers and has delivered a number of Webinars and Summer Courses in the areas of motor development, handwriting and playful literacy. Sinéad is also a member of the well-being committee in Marino Institute of Education and has delivered a number of initiatives for staff and students in the area of well-being, including sensory play and movement. Sinéad would relish the opportunity to research alongside teachers in schools, with the aim to enhance children's learning and experiences in schools and to inform classroom practice. Sinéad is committed to endeavouring that her research will be translatable to the classroom context and that it will serve the educational needs of those children who need it most.
